Part 2: Continuous Writing (40 marks)

Write a composition of at least 150 words about a challenge.

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic. Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- What was the challenge?
- Why was it challenging?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

Whenever I see the scar on my hand, I remember the scene that had happened in 2005, January 24. It was the first time I went for a challenge.

Over there, it has “Cycling Competition Fast Timing” and fotosearch. It was fun but difficult. If we miss any of this, we will die.

The challenge was about cycling in Mount Evarest and sing like a parrot. It was all about singing and cycling. It was very scary.

It was challenging because we must “compulsory” cycle in the Mount Everast. It will be slippery.

My friends and I join it. We did complete the challenge. I made my parents proud. We were so happy that we overcome the challenge.

The next time I will go again to feel the thrill. Please try if not you will not get to feel the thrill. All the best for the first timers.

Challenges are part of life and come in many different types, some require one to complete tasks within a ridiculously short time, while others require one to complete Herculean tasks. People of all types face challenges from the geniuses that try to formulate cures for cancer, to adventures that cycle up the steepest slopes. People of all ages face challenges too. Babies are challenged to eat up their porridge while the elderly are challenged to walk a few steps. The poor face challenges to feed the family while the rich face challenges to get a Ferrari for every family member. Ordinary citizens face challenges to lead a useful and productive life while the government face challenges to make life better for the citizens...
